

A National Food Policy for Canada

OTTAWA, December 18, 2017 — The Canadian Agri-Food Policy Institute (CAPI) along with many food and agriculture organizations has been actively in consultations with the Government of Canada developing a national food policy. This work looks at how the important question of ongoing governance of a national policy might be undertaken.

CAPI and other organizations contributed to the research, analysis and construction of a report written by Food Secure Canada (FSC).
